Planning a Fun Day

It is a very bright and sunny Sunday afternoon. Tuna, Eda, and Lily are at Lily's brand-new flat on the top floor of a new building near the centre of the town. It looks small but very modern and comfortable. There are two bedrooms, a big kitchen, a big dining room, and a wide sitting room. The kids are sitting on the balcony and enjoying a lazy Sunday after a long week of school and chit-chatting about their days. Suddenly, Lily comes up with an idea.

"Guys, listen up! I have a brilliant idea. Why don't we go to the street fair near the coast? The most famous food festival will be in our town today. We can taste many types of food such as pasta, fresh fish, desserts, and more! If we are lucky, there will be some Turkish food, too. What do you think?" asks Lily.

"Food festival? It's my favourite event! We tried so many dishes, such as içli köfte, mantı, and baklava last year at that festival. They were so delicious. I love Turkish food!" says Eda happily. "There was also Turkish music, so many people danced halay. I even tried traditional art like ebru painting. It was full of different and fun activities," adds Eda. Lily answers, "I've never tried Turkish döner before, so I don't want to miss this chance. We should run from one food stall to another!"

Tuna gets excited about this suggestion, "Food festival? My stomach is dancing right now. I'm starving. Let's take a tour of all the stalls there and try every different kind of food. This is going to be the best day ever! I like trying new things with you."

Eda looks at Tuna. "Easy, Tuna! Don't you remember last Saturday? You ate the whole bakery just by yourself. You are trying to lose weight, so you have to be careful about your diet," says Eda and warns him.

Tuna's face suddenly falls, and he looks so sad. Lily still wants to go to this festival, and she tries to persuade her friends. "Don't worry, Tuna. There will be plenty of healthy and light food, too. Fresh vegetables, soup, and even grilled meat." Tuna jumps up excitedly, "Perfect! Let's get ready. I want to try every dish from sweet to salty." "Okay, let's butter up our parents to get permission to go to the festival!" says Eda excitedly.

At the Food Festival

The festival is near the art gallery by the coast. It is next to the sports centre and the old castle. The area is full of local tourists and families. The place looks so peaceful with music playing softly, and the delicious smell of spices and fresh food.

"Can you believe we are finally here? I can't wait to taste all of them," says Lily.

"Me neither!" adds Eda.

They are already looking at the colourful food stalls.

"I am so hungry that I can eat a whole cow," says Tuna.

The girls are shocked to hear this.

"Well, not a real cow. You know what I mean, haha," adds Tuna with a big laugh.

"What are we going to try first?" asks Lily.

Eda's stomach growls, and she answers, "Something sweet for sure! Maybe a tart or a biscuit? I saw a stall full of sweets and desserts near the entrance."

"Wait, Eda! We should get a main dish first, or we will get a sugar crash really fast. It's very unhealthy. How about starting with some pasta or meat?

I can smell the Adana Kebab from here!" says Lily.

Trying New Tastes

They are at a busy part of the festival now. The air is full of the smell of spices, meat, boiled pasta, freshly baked bread, something sweet and fruity. There is a crowd in front of a pasta stall.

"Look at that line, guys! It must be really good. There are so many people waiting for it. I usually don't like waiting but it's worth it for good pasta!" says Lily.

After waiting a little while, it's their turn to order.

"Welcome kids, can I take your orders?" says the famous pasta chef.

"Hi, what do you recommend?" asks Tuna.

"You can try our special recipe with garlic and lemon," says the chef.

"Thank you, chef. Can I have a plate of your garlic pasta, please?" says Eda.

"Of course, ma'am! It is freshly made with high-quality ingredients and cooked carefully," replies the chef.

"Make mine the biggest plate! I'm so hungry," adds Eda.

A waiter brings their orders.

"Wow! It looks really tasty with dried lemon pieces on top of it," says Tuna.

"I want to try this masterpiece, too!" says Lily.

Eda smiles, "Let's share it. Sharing is caring!"

Memories to Remember

They are at the fish and meat stall now.

"I want to taste grilled tuna. It is healthy and delicious," says Eda.

Tuna scans the menu quickly, "I think I am going to have vegetable soup. It is light and warm. This way, I can stay on track with my diet."

"I'm going for Adana Kebab. You know, meat is life! I love Turkish food," says Lily.

After paying for their food and taking it, they sit on a wooden terrace under the bright sun and enjoy their food with a beautiful view of their neighbourhood.

"This is the greatest day ever! We should eat out more often. Trying different food with you is a fun activity," says Lily happily.

Eda nods her head, "Also, the service here is amazing! Everyone is so kind and friendly," she adds.

"I definitely agree. This food festival is the best in our town. Lots of locals and tourists come here every year," says Tuna. After their meal, Eda says, "Let's take a photograph together. This place is too beautiful to forget. Say cheese! "

"Say pizza! It's better than cheese!" says Tuna with a big laugh.

On The Way Back Home

As they walk towards the exit, they see a stall selling jam and oil.

"Hey, Lily! Do you want to get some jam for your mum? She always loves homemade things," says Tuna.

"That's a perfect idea. It's really a sweet way to say I love you," answers Lily.

On their way back home, they talk about their next plans.

Eda says, "It was such a great experience. Let's come again next year."

"Yes, also we can attend a cooking event!" says Lily.

"Good idea! I want to learn how to cook," adds Tuna.

"You know, our kitchen is really the heart of our house! Why don't we cook the dishes we tried today." says Lily.

Eda smiles, "I bought some spices and fresh herbs from a stall. We can use them in our special recipe."

Tuna adds, "I can bring my mum's recipe book and try to help you."

They all laugh and walk happily. Their stomachs and hearts are full. They have great memories together.
